Company history/background

The company is a family business rooted in fruit cultivation, with a rich history spanning over 30 years as a producer of pressed fruit juices. Over the past decade, the business has undergone significant professionalization in collaboration with investors, all while preserving its traditional values. This blend of heritage and innovation positions the company as a trusted and high-quality provider in the premium fruit juice market.

Other

The decision to sell the company is a mutual agreement between the shareholders. For one, it is time to step back and focus on personal priorities, while the other sees this as a natural moment to pursue a new career direction. Both are committed to ensuring the company is handed over to a successor who can build on its strong foundations and drive further growth.

Their post-sale involvement will be tailored to the buyer's preferences, with options ranging from staying on for an agreed transition period to other arrangements being open for discussion.

This proposition is attractive to a strategic buyer seeking to expand with a premium product line, as well as to an MBI candidate with sufficient resources, for whom the company offers an ideal springboard.
